A lover of music for as long as she can remember, Julie Brumback has taught music to grades K-12 in three different states. She earned her Music Education degree at Cedarville University and her Master's of Music in Choral Conducting from the University of South Florida. Julie, her husband, and their five children moved to Cincinnati in 2017, and she has enjoyed being involved in various aspects of the vibrant arts community Cincinnati offers. She began working with Cincinnati Youth Choir as an accompanist and teacher for the Cincinnati Choral Academy and Vivo Coro programs, and as the Director of CCA she hopes to introduce students to the joy of singing and foster a sense of community and belonging that is fundamental to choral music. She is a regular leader of worship at her church, Missio Dei, and she teaches several private piano students. She is also a choral accompanist in the Forest Hills School District. When she isn't pursuing her various musical endeavors, you can probably find her baking or spending time outside with her family.
